

Turnip Raising.

The first requisite for securing a first rate crop of turnips is a piece of land favorably located with regard to moisture and sunshine, and above all that the land shall be well charged with productive power—in other words, that it shall be in a high state of fertility. Many simple, innocent and ignorant farmers, seem to be possessed of the idea, that there are certain few crops, that by a little skillful manuevering, may be secured, of good quality and large quantity, from land that has been neglected or exhausted by previous crops. Chief among these are beans, buckwheat and turnips. Proverbially, that land is poor indeed that will not yield a crop of white beans; yet no farmer ever raised a good crop of beans on poor land, and the same is equally true of buckwheat and turnips. The sooner we learn that the price of every crop is well conditioned soil and careful cultivation, the better. It is idle to think that after the principal planting is over, and all the best land and manure appropriated, that we can turn over a piece of soil in the corner of some old pasture, and from it secure a good crop of turnips.

For the best success with this crop new land is most desirable on account of the large amount of potash it contains, and the less fertility the young plants being cut off by insects. Many varieties, as the ruta baga, cow horn, yellow stone and golden ball, should be cultivated in rows about thirty inches apart. Turnips do better when sown in the field where they are expected to grow, rather than to be sown in a bed and then transplanted to the field. After the third leaf appears they should receive a top dressing of wood ashes which will hasten their growth and stay the ravages of the turnip fly. If ashes are not abundant, then a solution of potash may be sprinkled on the plants with a watering pot, and afterwards dusted over with plaster.

Turnips that make a quick and rapid growth are much better in quality than those grown slowly. Frequent hoeing and stirring of the soil pays as well with this crop as with cabbage; but these vegetables should not soon succeed each other on the same ground. The flat French turnip is best grown by being sown broadcast on good soil with a top-dressing of some fertilizer containing considerable potash. This crop may with advantage be sown in rows, which improves the flavor by removing any bitterness that may exist.

Among all the culinary vegetables none contain so little nutritious material and so much water comparatively, as turnips. For a continuous diet they are not desirable, either for the human family or farm animals in our climate; but when used in connection with other and more highly nitrogenized food, or alternating with it, they are most excellent, acting as an alternative upon the system and stimulating the secretions and digestion.

A Bit of Romance.

Correspondence of the Washington Capital. One of the romances of the Australia tells of a married pair appearing on shipboard at the moment the gangway plank was being pulled in at the dock in New York. A stateroom had been procured in some mysterious manner and large trunks followed, but the owners came last, and the captain was somewhat puzzled to find that the man on the passenger list and the occupants of the stateroom, were not the same. After the ship, however, lost sight of land, the captain was taken into the confidence of the gentleman and told of an elopement. The groom was a man about forty years of age, a foreigner and a count, with a coal black moustache on his face and a castle on the Rhine. He had the hard, handsome face common to Mississippi gamblers, and dressed himself in the same gorgeous style. The bride, without being handsome, had large, brilliant blue eyes, that in their helpless, pleading expression, won the sympathy of all on board.

The Count treated the bride with elaborate courtesy, always getting out of the way when the poor thing suffered from sea-sickness and after expressing his concern for madam in the choicest phrase. He expressed himself enviously terrified by the monotony of the sea, and tried hard to enslave certain gentlemen into games of chance, only to pass the time, however. He was strongly averse to gambling. At the end of the voyage the pair disappeared, and the two fugitives were heard of no more until months after when the Australia was on her way back to New York, when the kind-hearted captain learned that a woman traveling alone was very ill in the steerage. Seeking her with the ship's physician, he was astonished to find in the sick steerage passenger the Count's bride of a few months before. He vacated his stateroom to the poor woman in her faded dress, and with but a little in her hand. It was the wife of little by little of offed parents and a cruel husband, who, finding a helpless wife, without money, on his hands, first abused and then deserted her. She had parted with the few bits of jewelry left her by the brute, and was now getting back as best she could, ruined and broken-hearted, to her old home.

The ship was approaching New York. The weary passengers collected on deck saw the poor creature, with little remaining of her former self but the wistful, confiding look of her large blue eyes, that from out the pale, sunken face seemed larger than ever. Those who watched her more closely saw at times a wild gleam in them, as if for a second her poor, numbed faculties were unshined and crazy. The vessel, aided by wind and steam, was dashing on, nearing every second the entrance to the bay, when suddenly the startled passengers heard a wild scream, saw a flash of white garments, a splash, and then the wild cry of some one overboard. The steamer was stopped, the boats lowered, and after an hour's search the body of the poor woman was recovered and brought on board.

Pretty Strong.

An incident attending a ride on Sunday last is told by the Lancaster (Penn.) Express, the parties being Mr. Stephen Musser, of Marietta, and a lady from Philadelphia. The lady held the reins, and in rounding a curve turned too suddenly, resulting in a tilt of the buggy, which threw her head foremost from her seat. Her body had already left the buggy, and she was descending upon her head between the wheels, when Mr. Musser, with that quickness of thought that comes to some persons in the hour of danger, seized her by her bustle with his left hand, while he grasped the reins and checked the horse with the right hand. The bustle was fortunately well secured, and the lady was saved.

American Russian Sheet Iron.

The secret of the manufacture of this famous iron has been discovered by a live Yankee while on a visit to St. Petersburg. During his visit he was introduced by our minister to the czar, who, to show his utmost politeness to an American, caused him to be shown all objects of interest in the city, among which was a manufactory of the far-famed iron.

"Russian sheet iron" has appeared in the English market in competition with the native product, to which it is in every way equal. This is smart, but it is business.

The Rhinoceros Loose.

Some recent incidents in a circus at Toronto are thus described by the Globe: "Part of the performance in the circus is the 'trot' made by the cow rhinoceros, and accordingly at the proper time the brute was led forth. The animal seems to be quite indolgent, but it got bulky yesterday afternoon, and it was only after a good deal of shoving and whipping that it could be induced to leave its corner. The brute has an immense bit in its mouth, and is led or guided by ropes attached to this. The route lay from the outer tent through a centre tent, and so into the hippodrome. This was accomplished with a good deal of exercise and yelling of drivers and the deep bellowing of the rhinoceros. The thing was reached at last and the animal had become when the animal bolted, breaking away from the leading ropes, and made straightway across the seats placed on the ground, and in direction of the door. Now it became evident to the audience in this quarter that the cow was loose, and the manifestations that followed this conviction were varied, both in quantity and quality. One unanimous impression seized hold of them, that was to place a reasonable distance between them and the cow. The majority uttered a succession of screams in doing this, while they dropped between the seats or sprang over them, rolling over in unfeigned terror. In the meantime the keepers were in pursuit, and the roar of Capt. Prince's choicest troops closed in to surround the cow, but they opened out again in skirmishing order with military celerity, retreating twelve paces while the brute was being lassoed. While all this was going on in the hippodrome the noise; and the roars of the lion and the chattering of monkeys and the screams of all the feathered tribes, made an uproar that those who heard it will not soon forget. For the rest the performance was successfully carried out."

New Method of Building.

The English papers are giving very flattering accounts of a new method of constructing buildings for all purposes, by the use of wood and concrete. A frame work is made of wood and concrete, along which wires are stretched, to which concrete is applied. By this arrangement not only are the walls and floors of the building made, but the doors, stairs, banisters, partitions and shelving are formed of the same material. For doors, window and shade casings, as well as for thin partitions, some fibrous materials are worked into the concrete in order to produce a strong cohesion and to prevent cracking. Buildings made in this way are absolutely fire-proof, and are remarkably cheap. A house made in this way was subjected to a very great heat from fires made on the outside, and the building not only escaped injury of any kind, but persons remained in the upper story all the while. Even the furniture in the room was unharmed. Several large blocks and numerous farm buildings are being constructed of wire and concrete in the north of England. Houses constructed in this way require no lathing, and the floor for carrying of the smoke and foul air are found in the walls. By using cement of different colors buildings may be made highly ornamental. It is quite likely that buildings of this kind will soon be erected in this country. It would seem that this invention would solve the question of how stock should be sheltered.

To Cure Epizootic.

Give one tablespoonful of pulverized tobacco once each day in feed. As prevention, hang a few handfuls of tobacco in the stall of each horse. Six stables of horses about here had tobacco hanging in the loft last fall while the epizootic was prevailing, and no horse in those stables took the disease, while all other stables were visited by the pestilence. This disease is quite likely to appear again, hence this may be valuable information.

A Bit of Romance.

Correspondence of the Washington Capital. One of the romances of the Australia tells of a married pair appearing on shipboard at the moment the gangway plank was being pulled in at the dock in New York. A stateroom had been procured in some mysterious manner and huge trunks followed, but the owners came last, and the captain was somewhat puzzled to find that the name on the passenger list and the occupants of the stateroom, were not the same. After the ship, however, left sight of land, the captain was taken into the confidence of the gentleman and told of an elopement. The groom was a man about forty years of age, a foreigner and a count, with a coal black moustache on his face and a castle on the Rhine. He had the hard, handsome face common to Mississippi gamblers, and dressed himself in the same gorgeous style. The bride, without being handsome, had large, winning blue eyes, and in her helpless, coqueting sort of expression, won the sympathy of all on board.

The Count treated the bride with elaborate courtesy, always getting out of the way when the poor thing suffered from sea-sickness and after expressing his concern for madam in the choicest phrase. He expressed himself enviously of the monotony of the sea, and tried hard to enslave certain gentlemen into games of chance, only to pass the time, however. He was strongly averse to gambling. At the end of the voyage the pair did appear, and the two fugitives were heard of no more until months after when the Australia was on her way back to New York, when the kind-hearted captain learned that a woman traveling alone was very ill in the steerage. Seeking her with the ship's physician, he was astonished to find in the sick steerage passenger the Count's bride of a few months before. He vacated his stateroom to the poor woman in her faded finery, and little by little he learned her story. It was the old, old story of a foolish parents and a cruel husband, who, finding a helpless wife, without money, on his hands, first abused and then deserted her. She had parted with the few bits of jewelry left her by the brute, and was now getting back as best she could, ruined and broken-hearted, to her old home.

The ship was approaching New York. The weary passengers collected on deck saw the poor creature, with little remaining of her former self but the wistful, confiding look of her large blue eyes, that from out the pale, sunken face seemed larger than ever. Those who watched her more closely saw at times a wild gleam in them, as if for a second her poor, numbed faculties were unbinged and crazy. The vessel, aided by wind and steam, was dashing on, nearing every second the entrance to the bay, when suddenly the startled passengers heard a wild scream, saw a flash of white garments, a splash, and then the wild cry of some one overboard. The steamer was stopped, the boats lowered, and after an hour's search the body of the poor woman was recovered and brought on board.

Turnip Raising. The first requisite for securing a first rate crop of turnips is a piece of land favorably located with regard to moisture and sunshine, and above all that the land shall be well charged with productive power—in other words, that it shall be in a high state of fertility. Many simple, innocent and ignorant farmers, seem to be possessed of the idea, that there are certain few crops, that by a little sly maneuvering, may be secured, of good quality and large quantity, from land that has been neglected or exhausted by previous crops. Chief among these are beans, buckwheat and turnips. Probably, that land is poor indeed that will not yield a crop of white beans; yet no farmer ever raised a good crop of beans on poor land, and the same is equally true of buckwheat and turnips. The sooner we learn that the price of every crop is well conditioned soil and careful cultivation, the better. It is idle to think that after the principal planting is over, and all the best land and manure appropriated, that we can turn over a piece of soil in the corner of some old pasture, and from it secure a good crop of turnips.

For the best success with this crop new land is most desirable on account of the large amount of potash it contains, and the less liability of the young plants being cut off by insects. Many varieties, as the ruta baga, cow horn, yellow stone and golden ball should be cultivated in rows about thirty inches apart. Turnips do better when sown in the field where they are expected to grow, rather than to be sown in a bed and then transplanted to the field. After the third leaf appears they should receive a top dressing of wood ashes which will hasten their growth and stay the ravages of the turnip fly. If ashes are not abundant, then a solution of potash may be sprinkled on the plants with a watering pot, and afterwards dusted over with plaster.

Turnips that make a quick and rapid growth are much better in quality than those that grow slowly. Frequent hoeing and stirring of the soil pays as well with this crop as with cabbage; but these vegetables should not soon succeed each other on the same ground. The flat French turnip is best grown by being sown broadcast on good soil with a top-dressing of some fertilizer containing considerable potash. This crop may with advantage be allowed to remain unharvested until after several severe frosts, which improves the flavor by removing any bitterness that may exist.

Among all the culinary vegetables none contain so little nutritious material and so much water comparatively, as turnips. For a continuous diet they are not desirable, either for the human family or farm animals in our climate; but when used in connection with other and more highly nutritious material, alternating with it, they are most excellent, acting as an alternative upon the system and stimulating the secretions and digestion.

A Bit of Romance. Correspondence of the Washington Capital. One of the romances of the Australia tells of a married pair appearing on shipboard at the moment the gangway plank was being pulled in at the dock in New York. A statesman had been rescued in some mysterious manner and long trunks followed, but the owners came last, and the captain was somewhat puzzled to find that the name on the passenger list and the occupants of the stateroom were not the same. After the ship, however, lost sight of land, the captain was taken into the confidence of the gentleman and told of an elopement. The groom was a man about forty years of age, a foreigner and a count, with a coal black moustache on his face and a castle on the Rhine. He had the hard, handsome face common to Mississippi gamblers, and dressed himself in the same gorgeous style. The bride, without being handsome, had large, winning blue eyes, that in their helpless, coqueting sort of expression, won the sympathy of all on board.

The count treated the bride with elaborate courtesy, always getting out of the way when the poor thing suffered from sea-sickness and after expressing his concern for madam in the choicest phrase, he expressed himself enormously terrified by the monotony of the sea, and tried hard to enervate certain gentlemen into games of chance, only to pass the time, however. He was strongly averse to gambling. At the end of the voyage the pair did appear, and the two fugitives were heard of no more until many months after when the Australia came on her way back to New York, when the kind-hearted captain learned that a woman traveling alone was very ill in the steerage. Seeking her with the ship's physician, he was astonished to find in the sick steerage passenger the Count's bride of a few months before. He vacated his state-room to the poor woman in his faded finery, and little by little he learned her story. It was the old, old story of offended parents and a cruel husband, who, finding a helpless wife, without money, on his hands, first abused and then deserted her. She had parted with the few bits of jewelry left her by the brute, and was now getting back as best she could, ruined and broken-hearted, to her old home.

The ship was approaching New York. The weary passengers collected on deck, saw the poor creature, with little remaining of her former self but the wistful, confiding look of her large blue eyes, that from out the pale, sunken face seemed larger than ever. Those who watched her more closely saw at times a wild gleam in them, as if for a second her poor, numbed faculties were unshinged and crazy. The vessel, sailing by wind steam, was dashing on, nearing every second the entrance to the bay, when suddenly the startled passengers heard a wild scream, saw a flash of white garments, a splash, and then the wild cry of some one overboard. The steamer was stopped, the boats lowered, and after an hour's search the body of the poor woman was recovered and brought on board.

Pretty Strong. An incident attending a ride on Sunday last is told by the Lancaster (Penn.) Express, the parties being Mr. Stephen Musser, of Marietta, and a lady from Philadelphia. The lady held the reins, and in rounding a curve turned too suddenly, resulting in a tilt of the buggy, which threw her head foremost from her seat. Her body had already left the buggy, and she was descending upon her head between the wheels, when Mr. Musser, with that quickness of thought that comes to some persons in the hour of danger, seized her by her bustle with his left hand, while he grasped the reins and checked the horse with the right hand. The bustle was fortunately well secured, and the lady was saved.

The Rhinoceros Loose. Some recent incidents in a circus at Toronto are thus described by the Globe: "Part of the performance in the circus is the 'trot' made by the cow rhinoceros, and accordingly at the proper time the brute was led forth. The animal seems to be quite inoffensive, but it got bulky yesterday afternoon, and it was only after a good deal of shoving and whipping that it could be induced to leave its corner. The brute has an immense bit in its mouth, and is led or guided by ropes attached to this. The route lay from the outer tent through a centre tent, and so into the hippodrome. This was accomplished with a good deal of exercise and yelling of drivers and the deep bellowing of the rhinoceros. The ring was reached at last and one revolution made, when the animal bolted, breaking away from the leading ropes, and made straightway across the seats placed on the ground, and in direction of the door. Now it became evident to the audience in this quarter that the cow was loose, and the manifestations that followed this conviction were varied, both in quantity and quality. One unanimous impression seized hold of them, that was to place a reasonable distance between them and the cow. The majority uttered a succession of screams in doing this, while they dropped between the seats or sprang over them, rilling over in unfeigned terror. In the meantime the keepers were in pursuit, and a body of Capt. Prince's choicest troops closed in to surround the cow, but they opened out again in skirmishing order with military celerity, red-dressing twelve times while the brute was being lassoed. While all this was going on in the hippodrome the other animals had become distracted by the noise; and the roars of the lion and the chattering of monkeys and the screams of all the feathered tribes, made an uproar that those who heard it will not soon forget. For the rest the performance was successfully carried out."

New Method of Building. The English papers are giving very flattering accounts of a new method of constructing buildings for all purposes, by the use of wire and concrete. A frame work is made of wood or iron supports, along which wires are stretched, to which concrete is applied. By this arrangement not only are the walls and floors of buildings made, but the doors, stairs, banisters, partitions and shelving are formed of the same material. For doors, window and show casings, as well as for thin partitions, some fibrous material are worked into the concrete in order to produce a strong cohesion and to prevent cracking. Buildings made in this way are absolutely fire-proof, and are remarkably cheap. A house made in this way was subjected to a very great heat from fire made on the outside, and the building not only escaped injury of any kind, but persons remained in the upper story all the while. Even the furniture in the room was uninjured. Several large blocks and numerous farm buildings are being constructed of wire and concrete in the north of England. Houses constructed in this way require no lathing, and the floor for carrying of the smoke and foot air are found in the walls. By using cement of different colors buildings may be made highly ornamental. It is quite likely that buildings of this kind will soon be erected in this country. It would seem that this invention would solve the question of how stock should be sheltered.

To Cure Epizootic. Give one table-spoonful of pulverized tobacco once each day in feed. As prevention, hang a few handfuls of tobacco in the stall of each horse. Six stables of horses about here had tobacco hanging in the loft last fall while the epizootic was prevailing, and no horse in those stables took the disease, while all other stables were visited by the pestilence. This disease is quite likely to appear again, hence this may be valuable information.

The Habit of Reading.
"I have no time to read," is the complaint, and especially of women, whose occupations are such as to prevent continuous book perusal. They seem to think, because they cannot devote as much attention to books as they are compelled to devote to their avocations, that they cannot read anything. But this is a great mistake. It isn't the books we finish at a sitting, which always do us the most good. Those we devour in the odd moments, half a dozen pages at a time, often give us more satisfaction, and are more thoroughly digested than those we make a particular effort to read. The men who have made their mark in the world have generally been the men who have in boyhood formed the habit of reading at every available moment, whether for five minutes or five hours.
It is the habit of reading rather than the time at our command that helps us on the road to learning. Many of the most cultivated persons, whose name have been famous as students, have given only two or three hours a day to their books. If we make use of spare minutes in the midst of our work, we can read a little, if but a page or a paragraph, we shall find our brains quickened and our thoughts enlarged by just so much increased satisfaction as the book gives us. Nothing helps along the monotonous daily round so much as fresh and striking thoughts, to be considered while our hands are busy. A new idea from a new volume is like oil which reduces the friction of the machinery of life. What we remember from brief glimpses into books often serves as a stimulus to action, and becomes one of the most precious deposits in the treasury of our recollection. All knowledge is made up of small parts, which would seem insignificant in themselves, but which, taken together, are valuable weapons for the mind and substantial armour for the soul. "Read anything continuously," said Dr. Johnson, "and you will be learned." The odd minutes which you are inclined to waste, if carefully availed of for instruction, will, in the long run, make golden hours and golden days that will be ever thankful for. — Scrivener's for August.

A Phantom Railway Train.
A phantom railway train is something new, and beats the phantom ship in impressive solemnity. According to the Scranton (Pa.) Free Press, since the completion of the Northern line of the D. & W. Railway, many accidents have occurred in the neighborhood of Factoryville. There is a deep "fill" just south of the depot, and engines, trains and passengers have rolled down the embankment. There is a sharp curve and deep cut north of the depot, through which the melancholy wind is always whistling and wailing. Some say that this is specially to be heard on the anniversary of one of the most fatal of the accidents, and that an unsubstantial train filled with ghostly passengers is then seen passing along the rail with the speed of the wind, while the shrill shrieks of men and women break on the stillness of the night. — The editor of the Free Press avers that he has often heard this sound as of an approaching train, and been decided by it. "There is the long roll as it moves on a straight line; the short puffs as the engine labors up grade, and the quick click! click! as it turns around a short curve." The sounds were never noticed until after the fatal accidents; now, "the hearing, dying, groaning sound is nightly heard, but never in the day time." There must be something in it, for the proprietor of the hotel near by bears testimony that frequently the hungriest guests, hearing the sound, leave the supper table for fear of losing the down train. A pretty story and a nice little subject for a poem in ten stanzas. We look for "The Phantom Engine," by J. H. Jones, never mind by whom! Poets, fine or superlative, to you, please!

Whitelaw Reid and Anna Dickinson.
A paragraph is floating the rounds of the papers regarding the return given to Whitelaw Reid by Miss Anna Dickinson. It is incorrect in many particulars, and this is the actual version of the affair. The papers throughout the country last fall persisted in the statement that Whitelaw Reid, the noble editor of the Tribune, had been killed by Anna Dickinson. Others again and again announced an engagement between those two prominent persons. Finally, Anna came to New York one day and Reid called on her. In the course of conversation Reid referred to the matter, saying, "You don't know how annoying it is to look over two or three hundred exchanges, and see reported day after day, the absurd story of your killing me; I wish you would permit me to contradict it." The gentle Anna replied, "Mr. Reid, if I can stand the story of the engagement, you certainly should stand the story of the killing." Mr. Reid soon after returned, feeling that he had come out of the interview second best. — Louisville Commercial.

A Child Led by a Rope.
The Atlanta (Ga.) Herald says that on Wednesday afternoon last some of the citizens of Forsyth, in that State, were surprised by the sight of an old negro leading through the streets a negro girl, eleven years old, by a rope, securely tied around her neck. The old man alleged that the child had been living at his house, and under his control, and that she stole $18 worth of jewelry belonging to a lady who owned the premises on which he lived; and that punishment was required of the child for her conduct. The old negro had beaten her head almost into a jelly and led her like a spaniel three miles in the heat of the day, till he had exhausted that she would have come with him without this resort. Her captor came to lodge her in jail in a summary manner, without trial. From this he desisted, on being informed that he would subject himself to indictment and prosecution for false imprisonment, and the ignorant little creature was allowed her liberty, at the suggestion of citizens of Forsyth.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN
BLOOD PURIFIER
JURUBEBA
Is the most powerful cleanser, strengthens, and removes all Glandular Obstructions known to Modern Medicine.
It is specially adapted to constitutions "worn down" and debilitated by the warm weather of Spring and Summer, when the blood is not in active circulation, consequently gathering impurities from sluggishness and imperfect action of the secretory organs, and is manifested by Tumors, Eruptions, Itches, Boils, Pustules, Scabs, &c.
When weary and languid from overwork, and dulness, drowsiness and inertia take the place of energy and vigor, the system needs a tonic to build it up and help the vital forces to regain their recuperative power.
In the heat of summer, frequently the Liver and Spleen do not properly perform their functions; the Liver and Urinary organs are inactive, producing weakness of the stomach and intestines and a predisposition to bilious derangement.
DR. WELLS' EXTRACT OF JURUBEBA is prepared directly from the SOUTH AMERICAN PLANT, and is peculiarly suited to treat these ailments; it will cleanse the BLOOD, strengthen the LIFE-GIVING POWERS, and REMOVE ALL OBSTRUCTIONS FROM IMPAIRED AND WEAKENED ORGANS.
It should be freely taken, as Jurubeba is pronounced by medical writers the most efficient PURIFIER, TONIC and DEOBSTRUENT known in the whole range of medicinal plants.

The Habit of Reading.

"I have no time to read," is the complaint, and especially of women, whose occupations are such as to prevent continuous book-reading. They seem to think, because they cannot devote as much attention to books as they are compelled to devote to their occupations, that they cannot read anything. But this is a great mistake. It isn't the books we finish at a sitting, which always do us the most good. Those we devour in the odd moments, half a dozen pages at a time, often give us more satisfaction, and are more thoroughly digested than those we make a particular effort to read. The man who has made their mark in the world have generally been the men who have in boyhood formed the habit of reading at every available moment, whether for five minutes or five hours.

It is the habit of reading rather than the time at our command that helps us on the road to learning. Many of the most cultivated persons, whose name have been famous as students, have given only two or three hours a day to their books. If we make use of spare minutes in the midst of our work, and read a little, it but a page or a paragraph, we shall find our brains quickened and our toil lightened by just so much increased satisfaction as the book gives us. Nothing helps along the monotonous daily round so much as fresh and striking thoughts, to be considered while our hands are busy. A new idea from a new volume is like oil which reduces the friction of the machinery of life. What we remember from brief glimpses into books often serves as a stimulus to action, and becomes one of the most precious deposits in the treasury of our recollection. All knowledge is made up of small parts, which would seem insignificant in themselves, but which, taken together, are valuable weapons for the mind and substantial armour for the soul. Read anything continuously," said Dr. Johnson, "and you will be learned." The old maxim which you are inclined to waste, if carefully applied for instruction, will, in the long run, make golden hours and golden days we shall be thankful for.—Scribner's for August.

A Phantom Railway Train.

A phantom railway train is something new, and beats the phantom ship in impressive solemnity. According to the Scranton (Pa.) Free Press, since the completion of the Northern division of the D. & L. W. Railway, many accidents have occurred in the neighborhood of Factoryville. There is a deep "fill" just south of the depot, and engines, trains and passengers have rolled down the embankment. There is a sharp curve and deep cut north of the depot, through which the melancholy wail is always whistling and wailing. Some say that this is specially to be heard on the anniversary of one of the most fatal of the accidents, and that an unsubstantial train filled with ghostly passengers is then seen passing along with the speed of the wind, while the shrill shrieks of men and women break on the stillness of the night. The editor of the Free Press avers that he has often heard this sound as of an approaching train, and been deceived by it. "There is the long roll as it moves on a straight line; the short pulls as the engine labors up grade, and the quick click! click! as it turns around a short curve." The sounds were never noticed until after the fatal accidents; now, "the wailing, dying, groaning sound is nightly heard, but never in the day time." There must be something in it, for the proprietor of the hotel near by bears testimony that frequently the hungry guests, hearing the sound, leave the supper table for fear of losing the down train. A pretty story and a nice little subject for a poem in ten stanzas. We look for "The Phantom Engine," by ——— never mind by whom! Poets, fine or supreme, to your pens!

Whitlaw Reid and Anna Dickinson.

A paragraph is floating the rounds of the papers regarding the retort given to Whitlaw Reid by Miss Anna Dickinson. It is incorrect in many particulars, and this is the actual version of the affair. The papers throughout the country last fall persisted in the statement that Whitlaw Reid, the noble editor of the Tribune, had been killed by Anna Dickinson. Others again and again announced an engagement between these two prominent persons. Finally, Anna came to New York one day and Reid called on her. In the course of conversation Reid referred to the matter, saying, "You don't know how annoying it is to look over two or three hundred exchanges, and see reported day after day, the absurd story of your killing me; I wish you would permit me to contradict it." The gentle Anna replied, "Mr. Reid, if I can stand the story of the engagement, you certainly should stand the story of the killing." Mr. Reid soon after returned, feeling that he had come out of the interview second best.—Louisville Commercial.

A Child Led by a Rope.

The Atlanta (Ga.) Herald says that on Wednesday afternoon last some of the citizens of Forsyth, in that State, were surprised by the sight of an old negro leading through the streets a negro girl, eleven years old, by a rope, securely tied around her neck. The old man alleged that the child had been living at his house, and under his control, and that she stole $18 worth of jewelry belonging to a lady who owned the premises on which he lived; furthermore, that punishment was required of the child for her conduct. The old negro had broken her head almost into a jelly and led her like a spaniel three miles in the heat of the day, tied, when he admitted that she would have come with him without the resort. Her captor came to lodge her in jail in a summary manner, without trial. From this he desisted, on being informed that he would subject himself to indictment and prosecution for false imprisonment, and the ignorant little creature was allowed her liberty, at the suggestion of citizens of Forsyth.

The Daily Freeman.

The Habit of Reading.

"I have no time to read," is the complaint, and especially of women, whose occupations are such as to prevent continuous book perusal. They seem to have no time to read, because they do not devote as much attention to books as they are compelled to devote to their avocations, that they cannot read anything. But this is a great mistake. It isn't the books we finish at a sitting, which always do us the most good. Those we devour in the old woman's half a dozen pages at a time, often give us more satisfaction and are more thoroughly digested than those we make a particular effort to read. The men who have made their mark in the world have generally been the men who have in boyhood formed the habit of reading at every available moment, whether for five minutes or five hours.

It is the habit of reading rather than the time at our command that helps us on the road to learning. Many of the most cultivated persons, whose names have been famous as students, have given only two or three hours a day to their books. If we make use of spare minutes in the midst of our work, and read a little, if but a page or a paragraph, we shall find our brains quickened and our thoughtfulness by just so much increased satisfaction as the book gives us. Nothing helps along the monotonous daily round so much as fresh and striking thoughts, to be considered while our hands are busy. A new idea from a new source, which reduces the fiction of the machinery of life. What we remember from brief glimpses into books often serves as a stimulus to action, and becomes one of the most precious deposits in the treasury of our recollection. All knowledge is made up of small parts, which would seem insignificant in themselves, but which, taken together, are valuable weapons for the mind and substantial armour for the soul. "Read anything continuously," said Dr. Johnson, "and you will be learned." The old motto which you are inclined to waste, if carefully availed of for instruction, will, in the long run, make golden hours and golden days we shall be ever thankful for.—Scribner's for August.

A Phantom Railway Train.

A phantom railway train is something new, and treats the phantom ship in a suggestive form. According to the Saratoga (Pa.) Free Press, since the completion of the Northern division of the D. L. and W. Railway, many accidents have occurred in the neighborhood of Factoryville. There is a deep "fill" just south of the depot, and engines, trains and passengers have rolled down the embankment. There is a sharp curve and deep cut north of the depot, through which the melancholy wind is always whining and wailing. Some say that this is specially to be heard on the anniversary of one of the most fatal of the accidents, and that an unsubstantial train filled with ghostly passengers is then seen passing along the rail with the speed of the wind, while the shrill shrieks of men and women break on the stillness of the night. The editor of the Free Press avers that he has often heard this sound as of an approaching train, and been deceived by it. "There is the long roll as it moves on a straight line; the short puffs as the engine labors up grade, and the quick click! click! as it turns around a short curve." The sounds were never noticed until after the fatal accidents; now, "the wailing, dying, groaning sound is nightly heard, but never in the day time." There must be something in it, for the proprietor of the hotel near by lately testified that the sound he heard was exactly the same as that of a train, leaving the supper table for fear of losing the down train. A pretty story and a nice little subject for a poem in ten stanzas. We look for "The Phantom Engine," by whom it was written. Poets, like or surprise, to your pens!

Whitelaw Reid and Anna Dickinson.

A paragraph is floating the rounds of the papers regarding the report given to Whitelaw Reid by Miss Anna Dickinson. It is true, in many particulars, and this is the actual version of the affair. The papers throughout the country last fall persisted in the statement that Whitelaw Reid, the noble editor of the Tribune, had been fitted by Anna Dickinson. Others again and again announced an engagement between these two prominent persons. Finally, Anna came to New York one day and he called on her. In the course of conversation Reid referred to the matter, saying, "You don't know how annoying it is to look over two or three hundred exchanges, and see reported day after day, the absurd story of your fitting me; I wish you would permit me to contradict it." The gentle Anna replied, "Mr. Reid, if I can stand the story of the engagement, you certainly should stand the story of the fitting." Mr. Reid soon after stood, feeling that he had come out of the interview second best.—Louisville Commercial.

A Child Led by a Rope.

The Atlanta (Ga.) Herald says that on Wednesday afternoon last some of the citizens of Forsyth, in that State, were surprised by the sight of an old negro leading through the streets a negro girl, eleven years old, by a rope, securely tied around her neck. The old man alleged that the child had been living at his house, and under his control, and that she stole $15 worth of jewelry belonging to a lady who owned the premises in which he lived; furthermore, that punishment was required of the child for her conduct. The old negro had beaten her head almost into a jelly and led her like a spaniel three miles in the heat of the day, when he admitted that she would have come with him without this resort. Her captor came to lodge her in jail in a summary manner, without trial. From this he desisted, upon being informed that he would subject himself to indictment and prosecution for false imprisonment, and the ignorant little creature was allowed her liberty, at the suggestion of citizens of Forsyth.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN

BLOOD PURIFIER

JURUBEBA

Is the most powerful cleanser, strengthener and remover of Glandular Obstructions known to Modern Medicine. It is especially adapted to constitutions "worn down" and debilitated by the warm weather of Spring and Summer, when the blood is not in active circulation, consequently gathering impurities from all directions, and manifesting by Tumors, Eruptions, Blisters, Boils, Pustules, Scrofula, &c., &c.

When weary and languid from overwork, and dulness, drowsiness and inertia take place of energy and vigor, the system needs a tonic to build up and help the Vital Forces to regain their recuperative power.

In the heat of Summer, frequently the Liver and Spleen do not properly perform their functions; the Liver and Spleen are inactive, producing weakness of the stomach and intestines and a predisposition to bilious derangement.

DR. WELLS' EXTRACT OF JURUBEBA

Is prepared directly from the SOUTH AMERICAN PLANT, and is peculiarly adapted to cleanse the LIVER, TONIC and PURIFIER, and to strengthen the LIFE-GIVING POWERS, and REMOVE ALL OBSTRUCTIONS from IMPAIRED AND ENFEEBLED Organs.

It should be freely taken, as Jurubeba is pronounced by medical writers the most efficient purifier, TONIC and PURIFIER known in the whole range of medicinal plants.
